Let's Start!

Relationships can be difficult, can't they?

Learning Outcome

Describe ways of solving problems and getting things done in work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about reactions and behavior.
- I can shift emphasis by using what, who, or that.
- I can ask for clarification and confirmation.

Ask your partner:

- What are some things you would like to improve about the way you communicate?
- In which situations is it better to share your emotions, and when is it better to keep them to yourself?

Let's Explore!

Vanessa helps Sally find the key to good communication.

* "The key" is something of crucial importance.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Vanessa: Sally, I read your last blog post, the one about emotional intelligence. Really compelling!
- Sally: Thanks! It's really interesting information, isn't it? What was especially provocative was how it can be applied at work.
- Vanessa: Yes! Who you really need to apply it to is your boss! You are going to use some of the EI strategies to improve your relationship with her, aren't you?
- Sally: Yes, for sure! I can't wait to try and implement some of what I learned about EI. I think if I can understand my boss and her emotions better, I'll be better able to gauge her behavior and where it's coming from.
- Vanessa: That's the key, isn't it? When she is acting aggressively or being overly critical, you'll know how to effectively interact with her.
- Sally: Yeah, and I'll understand my own reactions to her. That I've been confused by her behavior isn't really surprising. I haven't looked for the reasons behind her conduct. That's been my problem, hasn't it?
- Vanessa: Yes, I think that if you can recognize that her behavior toward you is not personal, then you won't be so negatively affected by it. Who you should focus on changing a bit is you. Work on being more cognizant of other people's emotions and reactions, and you will feel more confident with your boss.
- Sally: It sounds so easy, doesn't it?

Let's Practice!

Sally is hoping that she can learn how to interact more effectively with her boss.

Instructions: Find the words in the word search by reading the provided clues

- 1) I think I could understand my boss and her _____ better.
- 2) I'll be better able to _____ her behavior and where it's coming from.
- 3) She is acting _____ in her office.
- 4) Stop being overly _____.
- 5) You'll know how to effectively _____ with her.
- 6) I haven't looked for the reasons behind her _____.
- 7) Work on being more _____ of other people's emotions and reactions.
- 8) You will feel more _____ with your boss.

Let's Practice!

Are you able shift the emphasis in a sentence?

Instructions: Match the words and expressions on the left with their corresponding missing parts on the right.

- | | |
|-------------------------------|---|
| 1) What was especially | a) need to apply it to is your boss |
| 2) That's the key | b) her behavior isn't really |
| 3) That I've been confused by | c) to understand her behavior, isn't it? |
| Yes! Who you really. | d) focus on changing a bit is you. |
| 4) Who you should | e) provocative was how it can be applied at work. |

Extension Activity

Conduct a survey about Emotional Intelligence.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Think about the 5 categories of Emotional Intelligence: self-awareness, self-regulation, motivation, empathy, social skills.
- With a partner, write survey questions to find out how much emotional intelligence your classmates have.
- Write 10-12 questions to ask how emotionally intelligent people think they are.
- Ask your questions to 3 people.
- Present your findings to your class or group.

Target Words

- compelling (adjective): very interesting; able to capture and hold your attention
e.g. The novel was really compelling!
- provocative (adjective): causing discussion, thought, argument, etc.
e.g. What was especially provocative was how it can be applied at work.
- I can't wait (expression): used to express anticipation or excitement e.g. I can't wait until the weekend!
- to implement (verb): to begin to do or use (something, such as a plan) e.g. I'm excited to implement some of what I learned about EI.
- to gauge (verb): to measure or to estimate e.g. I'll be better able to gauge her behavior and where it's coming from.
- conduct (noun): the behavior of a person in a situation
e.g. I haven't looked for the reasons behind her conduct.
- cognizant (adjective): aware of something
e.g. I want to work on being more cognizant of other people's emotions and reactions.

Learning Points

What Clauses and Long Noun Phrases as Subjects

You shift emphasis from the subject of the sentence to another part of the sentence by using what, that and who phrases as subjects.

Usually, you focus on the subject - that is the person or thing that is doing the action.

Example: Joan told a hilarious joke.

(Joan does the action.)

When you want to emphasize a different part of the sentence, you isolate that part and put the rest of the information into a what-phrase (or a that-clause).

Example: What was hilarious, was the joke Joan told.

You can use that with a subordinate clause as the subject of a sentence.

Example: That she imitated our teacher was funny.

What or Who is placed at the beginning of a noun phrase. In this case, there is more emphasis on the content at the beginning of the sentence, so the person doing the action is not as important as other information, such as an adjective or verb in the sentence.

Example:

What was hilarious was her imitation of the teacher.

Who she should have made fun of was the principal.

Examples:

- What was especially provocative was how it can be applied at work.
- Who you really need to apply it to is your boss!
- That I've been confused by her behavior isn't really surprising.
- Who you should focus on changing a bit is you.

Tag Questions

You use tag questions to ask for clarification and confirmation.

A tag question is a short question at the end of a statement. Tag questions are mostly used in speech when we want to:

- confirm that something is true or is not true, or
- to get a reply from someone we are speaking to.

A positive statement is followed by a negative question tag.

Use this when you think the other person will agree by saying 'yes'.

- You were taken by surprise, weren't you?
- You are Canadian, aren't you?

Learning Points

- She has a brother, doesn't she?
- He can cook, can't he?

A negative statement is followed by a positive question tag.
Use this when you think the other person will agree by saying 'no'.

- You weren't taken by surprise, were you?
- You aren't Canadian, are you?
- She doesn't have a brother, does she?
- He can't cook, can he?

If the main verb is to be or a modal verb, the tag will be the same.
For all other main verbs, use the tag do/does or did/didn't.

Look at the examples in the chart:

Main Verb	Tag
He is/was	isn't/wasn't he?
You are	aren't you?
He can	can't he?
We could	couldn't we?
You will	won't you?
She has/had	doesn't/didn't she?
You have	don't you?
He likes	doesn't he?
You like	don't you?
You liked	didn't you?

Examples:

- It's really interesting information, isn't it?
- You are going to use some of the EI strategies to improve your relationship with her, aren't you?
- That's the key, isn't it?
- That's been my problem, hasn't it?
- It sounds so easy, doesn't it?
