Let's Start!

How does Emotional Intelligence help at work?

Learning Outcome

Describe ways of solving problems and getting things done in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What do you do to cope with communication problems at work or at home?
- What are some ways that you could increase your Emotional Intelligence?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about reactions and behavior.
- I can talk about hypothetical situations about the past.
- I can quote other people.

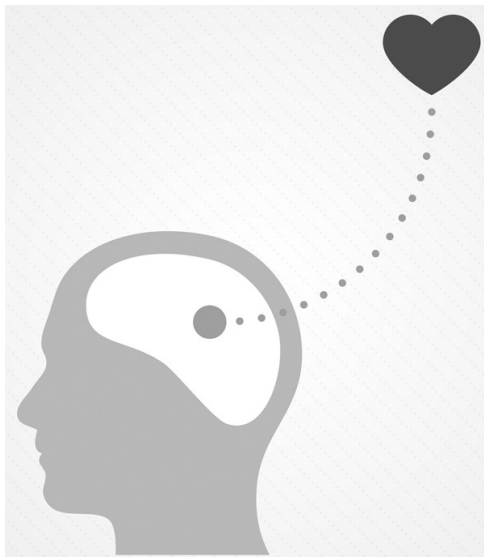

Let's Explore!

Sally blogs about Emotional Intelligence

* "Emotional Intelligence" is the capacity to understand and express one's own emotions and to understand other people's emotions.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

So, I've been having a few problems at work lately. I asked myself what I could do about it. A friend told me I had to learn more about managing my emotions. I had heard the term Emotional Intelligence and decided to find out more about it. I should have read about it before now because it is very interesting to me. Having this information last week could have helped me with my interactions with my boss.

Emotional Intelligence (EI) is how we describe our ability to recognize both our own emotions and the emotions of others. Further, it helps us not only to differentiate between different feelings, but also to be able to label them. From there, we are able to use that emotional information to help guide the way we think and behave. When you look at studies, they show that those people who have a high EI are generally in better mental health, show stronger job performance, and are more potent in their leadership skills. If you have Emotional Intelligence you can understand the emotions of other people.

A co-worker told me I needed to learn to communicate clearly and manage conflict. I probably would have coped better with stress at work if I had been more familiar with EI. Apparently it's possible to boost your EI level. A higher EI can improve your performance at work. It does this by helping you navigate through the workplace and its social complexities. This allows you to lead and inspire while excelling in your own career. People at work said that I could be more productive if I could communicate better. I should have done this research a long time ago!

Learning Points

Talking Hypothetically About the Past

You use could have, should have and would have to talk about things that were possible in the past and may or may not have happened.

The structure:

Subject + modal verb + have + verb (past participle)

I could have done

You should have made

She would have said

You use could have to talk about possibilities if something had been different in the past.
For example: Having this information last week could have helped me.

You use should have to talk about past events that did not happen and to speculate about events that may or may not have happened.

For example: I should have read about it before now.

You use should not have to speculate negatively about what may or may not have happened.

You also use should not have to express regret for past actions.

You use would have to imagine a result if something had been different in the past.

For example: I probably would have coped better with stress at work if I had been more familiar with EI.

* Would have expresses more certainty about the outcome or result than could have.

Examples:

- I should have read about it before now because it is very interesting to me.
- Having this information last week could have helped me with my interactions with my boss.
- I probably would have coped better with stress at work if I had been more familiar with EI.
- I should have done this research a long time ago!

Reported Speech and Questions

You use reported speech when you are saying (reporting) what other people said.

When you tell people what someone has said in the past, you need to change the verb to a tense further back in time.

Learning Points

Direct Speech	Reported Speech
"I like him."	He said he liked him.
"I' m coming to the party."	He said he was coming .
"I already ate ."	He said he had already eaten
"I can cook."	He told me he could cook.
"Where do you live ?"	He asked me where I lived .

You have to change the pronoun if you want to report what someone else said. Compare the two sentences below. In both cases the person actually said "I don't want to go."

- I said, "I don't want to go." > I said I didn't want to go.
- Bill said, "I don't want to go." > Bill said he didn't want to go.

Look at the chart below to see the changes in verb tense.

Direct Speech	Reported Speech
Simple Present	Simple Past
Present Progressive	Past Progressive
Simple Past	Past Perfect
Present Perfect	Past Perfect
Past Progressive	Past Perfect Progressive
Future Simple (will)	Conditional (would)
Modal can	Modal could
Modal may	Modal might
Modal will	Modal would

Examples:

- I asked myself what I could do about it.
- A friend told me I had to learn more about managing my emotions.
- A co-worker told me I needed to learn to communicate clearly and manage conflict.
- People at work said that I could be more productive if I could communicate better.
